BEAUTIFULVISION

Beauty is relative. And it must be relatively beautiful to work to work for the weblog beautifulmag.eu which is specialised on male nude photography. Since 2005 the creative Parisian duo behind that project browses magazines and the internet—always on the scout for new talents whose works they can present on their website. The breathtaking variety of pictures that has been shown on their website so far makes clear that there is not one significant definition of beauty. Beauty is rather something that's not palpable, something that happens between the photographer and the model, the viewer and the viewed.

With the BEAUTIFULVISION anthology there's now a printed survey of the men of beautifulmag.eu for the first time. About 250 pictures by 37 photographers from all over the world are assembled in this high class photo book. And whether you look at the bizarre and erotic works of Justin Monroe, the artfully adapted pictures of Mark Henderson or the ingeniously staged photographs of Eric Schwabel: Each photographer strikes an individual note; each photo moves you in its own way.

You move forward, step by step. You taste, you explore, you listen and you read. You discover him with your eyes, your lips, your fingertips. And when passion grows, you grow more hungry. Hungry for lust. Hungry for love. The feeling grows and becomes more intense. And your mutual moves are like a dance on flames of passion, a dream you thought you would never dream. And when all is said and done, you look him in the eyes to find him staring at you. Full of passion. Full of love. Full of satisfaction. And in anticipation of more. That is BEAUTIFUL.
