Jacob Mott WATCH US!

"WATCH US!" calls the cover of Jacob Mott's book—unnecessarily because once readers start leafing through it they won't be able to stop. The basis for his art is undoubtedly American bubblegum style, but Mott knows how to avoid a sticky aftertaste. His design of male sexuality comes straight from the shoulder and tends to be a little rough. Nevertheless it's always charming and full of humour and cleverness. His images are fully loaded with energy and a rough sensuality without showing all the work and the effort Mott put into them.

You can clearly tell that Tom of Finland's drawings were an inspiration for Mott – especially when it comes to muscles and other interesting body parts. The motto is obvious: More is not enough. You can also find some Japanese Manga style in these artworks—but the result of all those influences still is a real Mott; one to look at again and again and again.

Jacob Mott was born in Kent, England, in 1975. He grew up in the Eighties—a decade that inspired his works a lot. Drawing has been his passion ever since he was old enough to hold crayons in his hands. Since he's a teen he put a focus on sexy naked men. He says, he doesn't know where his fetish for huge watches comes from ... "It's been there as long as I can think."
